

2014 has started off in a wonderful way. As African Christian Schools enters it's 60th year of serving the people of Africa we are excited about the new horizons and opportunities to share the love of Jesus. For the past couple of years ACSF has been working towards completing our computer lab and technology center on the campus of WNCC. We are optimistic the lab will be up and running at the August lectureship and we will be launching new technology classes and distance learning programs in the fall of this year.

The African Violet Dinner this year had nearly 150 people present, but proved to be far more than just another fundraising event. This year's event was a reunion of workers and servants who have ministered to the people of Nigeria over the past 60 years. We were blessed to honor two amazing women (Ida Palmer & Joyce Anderson), but we also had the first child born on the field in 1954 (Pat Johnson) present with us for the evening. Joyce and Ida are living examples of what a lifetime of service looks like.

As part of the dinner we had 5 teenagers (all scheduled for mission trips this summer) helping to serve at the dinner. These two godly women, along with our speaker, Nigerian, Edet Udofia served as a tremendous example and inspiration to these teens. These young people are part of a new program African Christian School has implemented in 2014 - a scholarship program to inspire and train the next generation of missionaries. This year we will be helping several high school and college students in campaign efforts all across the continent of Africa.

Our two most urgent needs at present are funds for student scholarships (now about $250 per month) and we need to raise $1,500 to provide study Bibles to our graduates at WNCC and NCBC. If you can help, please send your support to ACSF, PO Box 41120, Nashville, TN 37204.
